THE exhibition of tableaux vivants for the benefit of the ants for the benefit of the Girl Scouts, put on at Rauscher's last evening, brought together a most interesting assemblage of society folk either as spectators or as participants. Under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Fisher, legends of the Arabian Nights and portraits by famous Spanish painters were protrayed.

Spanish painters were protrayed by a group of girls and young men prominent in society. A delightful performance it was, picturesque and colorful, with appropriate music accompany each picture and Myron Whitney giving interpretive readings in connection with the Arabian Nights' legends. The guests were greeted on arriving by Mrs. George Ehle, Mrs. Powell Clayton, Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, Mrs. Richard Harlow and Mrs. Frederick Brooke, all women who are actively interested in the work took on quite the atmosphere of a private party since everybody seemed to know everybody else, and there was much visiting about among the audience.
